Amanda Koster's This Is Beautiful project continues

[Jul 30, 2004] A third shoot of This Is Beautiful, an ongoing documentary project photographing a variety of women nude to honor and illustrate the beauty in all women's bodies.

The next shoot is a collaboration with the CEDRIC Centre in Victoria BC August 21-22, an eating disorder clinic. The collaboration is a result of Amanda's interview on FOX news with Leslie Miller for a story about young girls getting plastic surgery.

There is a pre-sale of the prints for $100 (before September 1).

You will have your choice from the next exhibition. Amanda will be printing the exhibition during December, so you choose and receive your print then, in advance. This is a great way to support an important project, one that has had positive effects on hundreds of people.

Framed pieces are valued by galleries at $400.

In an effort to raise money for the project, a complete labor of love funded by Amanda Koster, she is extending her pre-sale of the next This Is Beautiful exhibition-to-be. An exhibition is already confirmed at Empty Space theatre with bodyBODY January-February 2005, and then the exhibition will head up to Victoria.

The shoot is creating a huge buzz in Victoria. Amanda has been interviewed by Victoria News and Monday magazine, and a large feature spread will be published in both during the shoot weekend. Victoria radio station B107.3 is announcing the project every day and local TV station CHTV is also planning on covering the project as well. This is before anything has even begun!
